CONFERENCE ON EXTENSION EXPERIENCES AROUND THE WORLD

May 16 to 20, 1949

Purpose of Conference

In 1944, the Extension Service and the Office of Foreign Agricultural Relations of the Department of Agriculture jointly sponsored a conference on the contribution that extension methods and techniques might make to the rehabilitation of war-torn countries. The conference brought together the available information on extension methods in nine major areas of the world, and analyzed past experience in extending scientific information to rural people. Special care was given to the importance of cultural understanding as a basis for developing effective extension work.

We can assume that as a result of the increased attention the many countries have given to attacking some of their pressing problems through the extension approach, there have been many profitable experiences in adapting and developing educational methods to meet a wide range of needs. However, we do not know how extensive such developments have been, and the impact they have made on the country. The purpose, therefore, in calling a second conference is (1) to outline systematically either the kind of problems the various countries have, or those problems on which they seem likely to ask our help in solving through an extension approach; (2) to appraise the experiences the countries have had in the extension field since our 1944 conference; and (3) within the framework of each country's culture, to suggest the kinds of extension or related educational approaches that seem appropriate for given types of problems.

The conference itself is not an international conference. It will concern itself with the appraisal and adaptation of extension methods and techniques oriented to the needs and culture of a number of countries. Those who have been invited to take part in it are persons who have had experience in extension in other countries and have studied and understand the culture of rural people in the respective countries, or who are interested in preparing themselves for this type of work. The conference will not concern itself with the making of plans or the building of a program for agricultural extension work for the entire world. It will, however, outline problems and appraise the experiences countries have had in the extension field and suggest kinds of extension approaches that seem appropriate for given types of problems.
